

West Wins Wine Spectator Award

West Restaurant at The Twelve in Galway has won its third Wine Spectator Award, the only one to be awarded in Ireland this year. "Our wine list in West is all about giving people confidence in selecting a wine they will enjoy," general manager and sommelier Fergus O'Halloran stated. "As well as picking something good to drink, guests are also learning a little about new grapes and varieties. It's the most enjoyable learning process I know of. We are very proud of our third Award of Excellence, but even prouder of the fact that we are this year's only Irish winners." Wine Spectator magazine's annual Awards recognise specific restaurants that offer their guests diverse and unique selections that cater towards specific cuisines.
